Saturday 25th
23:00 - 00:00

Community Centre Stadium

Ticketed Event

"If Amy Winehouse and Sharon Jones had a love child, it would be Cass Eager," Mark Winkler, platinum award-winning lyricist.

Cass is an R&B soul blues singer with a sound that embodies old-school cool with bold sexy optimism. Her sound takes its cue from a vintage sonic swagger a-la Amy Winehouse and Sharon Jones, and when you press play you'll want to be sipping cocktails at your favourite lounge bar in LA with best friends and lovers alike.

Cass's songs remind you that if the champagne glass isn't already full, then it's at least half-full (and definitely never empty). Her signature chocolate-coated vocals are drenched in a feel-good vibe and her megawatt smile and natural charisma draw you in with gravitational force. Her songs shine a light on the woman you've been, the one you are becoming, and the one you're meant to be.

"The combined talents of both these two artists is really a perfect match and the chance to see them performing together should not be missed" - Myles O'Neil-Shaw PBS FM

What do Jim Moginie, Steve Pigram, Kylie Auldist, Mick Thomas, Freya Josephine Hollick, Brian Ritchie, Richard Tognetti, Tim Rogers, Nick Seymour, the late Dion Hirini (Vika & Linda Bull), Monique Brumby and Mark Atkins all have in common?

DELSINKI has joined creative projects with them all.

Shape-shifting uncategorizable post-colonialist DELSINKI is gaining momentum as an artist and a creative force in his own right. His second album CITY/COUNTRY, followed 2018's "And There Was Found, No Place For Them".

Debuting at #3 on the ARIA - Australian Country Music chart, City/Country is produced by Cameron McKenzie and reflects Delsinki's experiences, mixing with other songwriters and getting to the heart of a song. A musical and social bowerbird, Delsinki's stylistic approach contains traces of Tim Winton and John Brack alongside his musical influences, giving him a unique artistic vision of contemporary Australian life.

Country blues songstress, Misty Harlowe is a rising star hailing from the hills of Victoria's high country. Her music is inspired by her roots in Gippsland's Snowy River region. As a natural storyteller with stories of the Australian landscape, she charms the audience with her sweet velvety voice, intricate guitar playing, and strong country melodies. If Marty Robbins and Stevie Nicks wrote a song together round a campfire, it would emulate Misty's sound.

Singer-songwriter Maggie Alley grew up in the city, moving to the country in her teens. She took the formative energy of the sprawling, heated suburban cauldron that is Melbourne to quieter, darker, greener places, and used the space and time to develop a song-writing talent that saw ABC Radio compare her to "a young Patti Smith" at just 20.

Her song-stories come from the flawed feminine, her narrative lyrics drawn from experience in the world, absorbed consciously and unconsciously.

Steve is a local around the Marysville area, and he's just as at home backing a sultry singer in a Melbourne jazz cellar as he is playing solo at a community market.
